Asset Tracker - Getting Started

Powering-On the Asset Tracker (AT)

To power the AT on, press and hold the rubber button on the back until it flashes red. To power it off, press and hold the button again until it goes solid red and turns off.

Installing the AT

The Asset Tracker can be placed in or on just about anything, and since it has a long battery life, it does not need a power source. It can be attached with magnets, Velcro, tape, screws, or housed in a protective enclosure that doesn't inhibit RF transmission. It is recommended that you place the AT in a spot that has the clearest line of sight to the sky with the least metal obstructions, with the blank (no labels) side up if possible. Facing it to the side can be effective, and even pointing it down in the right conditions. The AT has so many applications, installation can get pretty creative.

Understanding How the AT Works

The AT first communicates with GPS satellites for a high accuracy location (within feet). If a good GPS signal cannot be acquired, the AT is designed to use the cell network for a backup location (within blocks). After it establishes its location, the AT communicates with the Track What Matters central database via the cell network.

Tools Needed:

Phillips Screwdriver,
Screws

Quick tip: Icons not only indicate the device location, but their colors indicate how long it's been since each device has moved.

Green = movement within the last 24 hours.

Yellow = movement 1-5 days ago.

Red = no movement in more than 5 days.

Purchasing a Replacement Battery

The battery in your AT unit should last from 6 months to 3 years, depending on how often you have chosen for it to transmit its location.
